

Wajid's story

Wajid is currently living in his car in the north of England, having suffered verbal and physical abuse from his wife.

On one occasion he was being throttled, and defended himself by pushing her off him but in the process left a bruise on one of her arms. The police were called and statements were taken from both parties but only Wajid was taken to the police station. There he received a caution after taking advice from the Duty Solicitor and now has a criminal record which is making it difficult for him to get a job.

He has left the home but could only take a few items with him.
