New Domestic Abuse Bill – An Opportunity For A More Inclusive and 21st Century Approach

(see notes to editors for core statistics)

The ManKind Initiative is the leading charity in the UK supporting male victims of domestic abuse. Following the measures announced by the Government on the Domestic Abuse Bill, the charity made the comments below:

Mark Brooks OBE, Chairman of the ManKind Initiative, said:

“We support the Government’s proposals in principle including the increased responsibilities on local councils, the fact that the legislation will apply to all equally and the inclusion of economic abuse in the definition, albeit we would like to see parental alienation included as well.

“The key opportunity is to make sure that there is a more inclusive approach to domestic abuse. This means ensuring that the application of the law, measures and guidance meets the needs of all victims’ individual needs including male and LGBTQ+ victims.

This will ensure more male and LGBTQ+ victims receive the support they need because they are better recognised by professionals, the justice system and society as a whole. It will be reflected in more services, more awareness campaigns and ultimately more victims escaping abuse because they no longer think no one will believe them, there is no support and they are alone ”

Other core measures that the charity would like to see in the Domestic Abuse Bill or more widely, include:

1. We believe the Government should be defining domestic abuse as a crime against an individual and no longer define it as a “gendered crime” which is an ideological position that marginalises male and LGBTQ+ victims.
2. We believe that Parental Alienation should be included in the statutory definition as a type of domestic abuse.
3. There should be alignment with Scotland on their definition of Coercive and Controlling behaviour thereby changing the ‘household test’.
4. There should be the proper enforcement of regular, wilful and deliberate breaches of Child Arrangement Orders and Non-Molestation Orders as this is a domestic abuse crime.
5. There should be statutory improvements in the accountability and transparency of the Domestic Abuse Commissioner.
6. There must be an inclusive and equal approach in the Statutory Guidance not one that skews the guidance to “classes” (and reinforces cognitive biases / stereotypes) of victims based on any of the protected characteristics, including gender.

Additional Whole System Changes

7. The introduction of an “Ending Intimate Violence Against Men and Boys” Strategy in parallel to the successful and welcome “Ending Violence Against Women and Girls” Strategy.
8. Introducing a National Statement of Expectations on domestic abuse for men and boys alongside the current National Statement of Expectations which focusses on women and girls.
9. Ensure there is a gender-inclusive narrative in Relationships and Sex Education.
10. Create a national network of refuges and safe houses for males and LGBTQ+ victims of domestic abuse. There are currently only 169 refuge/safe house places for men across the UK run by 35 organisations (36 of places are solely for men) – there are none in London.
11. Increase the level of appropriate and inclusive service provision for male victims of domestic abuse based on risk and need.
12. Creating proactive national/local awareness campaigns targeted at male and LGBTQ+ victims.
13. Improve and provide appropriate training to the police, local councils, the health sector and justice system to raise awareness on how to better support male victims of domestic abuse.
14. Improve support for female and LGBTQ+ perpetrators of domestic abuse.

15. Review and reform the legal definition of rape to include male and LGBTQ+ victims who are raped by women.
