

Men are victims too

Accredited training to help you support male victims of domestic abuse

- Created and delivered by qualified experienced experts for the UK's leading charity focussing on male victims of domestic abuse.
- Based on real-life experiences of male victims and front-line practitioners alongside the latest policy and academic research.
- Excellent reviews and transparent feedback from delegates.

Who is it aimed at?

If you are a police force, local authority, clinical commissioning group, NHS Trust, housing association or third sector/voluntary organisation looking to enhance your support for male victims of domestic abuse, our CPD accredited training is what you need. The training can include providing support to employers.

Why is it needed?

With one in six men likely to suffer domestic abuse in their lifetime, and one in every three victims being male, organisations and practitioners are realising that it is essential for men and their children to receive the support they need. This includes the need for statutory authorities to comply with and meet the duties and requirements of the Care Act 2014, Equality Act 2010 and the forthcoming Domestic Abuse Act.

In 2019, the police forces we trained rated our course as either Excellent (70%) or Good (30%)

Feedback from professionals (2019):

"The day was very insightful. The content, I believe, made us all take a step back and think how we respond to male victims. Very informative and helpful" Police Officer

"Fantastic, brilliant training and should be provided to all." Army Welfare Officer

"Great insight into the impact of domestic abuse on a male and how this can be magnified by the perception of men in society and how professional experience bias has an impact." Local Council Officer

One Day Training Course

We offer a one-day CPD accredited domestic abuse training course focussing on recognising and supporting male victims. It is developed and delivered by a team of qualified trainers who have extensive experience in this specialist field.

The course is based on the real life experiences of male victims, academic research, public policy initiatives and communications expertise.

It has been academically peer reviewed by the UK's leading experts on male victims of domestic abuse, qualified communications and public policy experts alongside male survivors.

The course can be delivered onsite making it accessible for your staff. Registered charities can access the training at a reduced rate.

The course covers the following modules:

Module 1:	Introduction, statistics and trends
Module 2:	Types of domestic and partner abuse against men
Module 3:	Male victims: lived experiences and barriers
Module 4:	How they can escape
Module 5:	How support services should respond
Module 6:	Creating male victim friendly services, policies and communications
Module 7:	The signs of male domestic abuse and what you can do (optional – for non practitioners)

You can make a difference to men suffering from domestic abuse.

About the ManKind Initiative

The Mankind Initiative was the first charity in Great Britain to support male victims of domestic abuse and has been doing so since 2001. We operate a national helpline receiving over 2,000 calls per year, provide training to statutory bodies, employers and charities and host the Male Domestic Abuse Network information portal. The charity provides advice, information and support to government departments, police forces and other agencies. We lead awareness campaigns to ensure men and their children get access to the help and support that they need.
